I. Catalog Description

Accompanies GEOL 1304, Historical Geology. This is a laboratory-based course. Laboratory activities will introduce methods used by scientists to interpret the history of life and major events in the physical development of Earth from rocks and fossils. Prerequisite: GEOL 1103. Corequisite: GEOL 1304. (0:3). Lab fee.

II. Course Objectives

Upon satisfactory completion of this course, the student will be able to:

- A. Classify and interpret depositional environments using sedimentary rocks and fossils.
- B. Taxonomically classify samples of geologically important fossil groups and use them to interpret the age of rocks on the Geologic Time Scale.
- C. Apply relative and numerical age-dating techniques to construct geologic histories including the correlation of stratigraphic columns.
- D. Reconstruct past continental configurations.
- E. Integrate multiple types of data to interpret Earth history.

III. THECB Learning Outcomes (ACGM)

Upon successful completion of this course, students will:

- 1. Classify and interpret depositional environments using sedimentary rocks and fossils.
- 2. Taxonomically classify samples of geologically important fossil groups and use them to interpret the age of rocks on the Geologic Time Scale.
- 3. Apply relative and numerical age-dating techniques to construct geologic histories including the correlation of stratigraphic sections.
- 4. Reconstruct past continental configurations.
- 5. Integrate multiple types of data to interpret Earth history.

IV. Evaluation

The procedure for determining the final grade will be decided by the instructor and presented to the student in the instructor syllabus.

A. Exams and Quizzes.

The number, frequency, and types of quizzes and exams are left to the discretion of the instructor. Lab exercises are required for each unit. Homework and papers may be assigned, corrected, and graded as the instructor decides.

B. Grading Scale:
