B. Post-assessment

1. The faculty member will require students to read and write various texts.
 - a. Students must demonstrate mastery of reading and writing skills through a variety of methods, such as essays and other written texts based on reading assignments and composed in a portfolio, reader responses, reading logs, projects, presentations, quizzes, or exams. Faculty members may allow students to peer-edit and revise as appropriate.
 - b. Students must complete at least five writing assignments of at least 400-500 words, such as essays.
 - c. Reading selections will be used for writing assignments and writing assignments will be used to gain reading skills.
 - d. An online lab application may be used by the faculty member's discretion.
2. To receive credit for the course, students must have a passing average of C or better in the course.

C. The INRW Portfolio

All faculty members are required to assign students a portfolio documenting their semester's work. Along with housing their INRW essays (and any other class content such as notes and in-class assignments), portfolios provide an occasion for students to reflect on what they learned in the course. By identifying specific readings and assignments, this reflection invites an introspective examination of how their writing process, reading comprehension, and analytical skills evolved over the course of the semester. The portfolio's overall grading methodology, grade percentage, and design (e.g., an electronic portfolio instead of a binder or notebook, aesthetic elements, etc.) are at the faculty member's discretion.

D. Plagiarism is both intellectual theft and academic dishonesty and will not be tolerated. Any work that is plagiarized could result in failure of the course. See the Student Handbook.

E. Remediation

At the faculty member's discretion, students may be allowed to rewrite papers or retest for higher grades. Make-up work and retakes of quizzes may be provided at the faculty member's discretion. Students seeking additional help may obtain tutoring assistance from one of the Writing Centers, located at most campuses.
